

Entered at the Postoffice at Accomac, H. V., as second-class matter.

On Monday the President threw a bombshell into the Republican camp in the shape of a message in reference to removals from office. He wields a trenchant pen, and in a dignified and philosophic manner meets the attempts of the Senate at coercion. He clearly and forcibly shows the difference between official and unofficial documents—and evidently means to maintain his constitutional rights and independence as the executive head of the government. Its reception aroused Senator Edmunds to the pitch of frenzy—and he wildly declared that since the document sent by Charles the 1st, to the British Parliament nothing like it had ever been seen. He forgot in his fury that the difference between the two papers lay in the great fact that while that monarch attempted to coerce the representatives of the people Mr. Cleveland is but carrying out the wishes of the people expressed at the polls. Upon a motion to refer to the Judiciary Committee party lines were strictly drawn—except that Eddie Berger, who counts for so little, voted with the Democrats. The President evidently has backbone, and we hope of the Andrew Jackson pattern. If he stands firmly and unflinchingly by his rights, and at the same time does his full duty in "turning the rascals out" as he has been all along rightly expected to do—he will receive the full and hearty support of the Democracy of the whole country. Skirmishing is over. The fight will now begin in earnest and it will be bitter.—We are glad of it. The time has come for paltering to cease. Let Mr. Cleveland look to the Democracy only for support and all will be well. If he falters—if he penders in the least to the Republicans—he is lost. He must swim by his Democracy—or sink without it.

The Republican Senate, instigated by Mahone, has entered upon the work of endeavoring to blacken the reputation and weaken the influence of Hon. John Goode, Jr., Solicitor General of the United States. With a full consciousness and integrity Mr. Goode has with characteristic honesty of purpose demanded to face his accuser—and that every charge and specification shall be fully, freely, and fairly investigated. No man in the broad limits of Virginia—whose judgment is not marked by partisan hate—for an instant doubts his innocence of the charges of fraud and bribery. His is too lofty a spirit to stoop to aught unbecoming on honest man and Christian gentleman. The charges are but the spewing out of the venom of William Mahone—fifty called the Virginia Outcast—who, for cause, was denounced by John Goode as "a liar and peltreer." This man has watched his opportunity and sheltered by the "privileges" of the Senate seeks to stab the man he equally hates and fears. If justice be done—if partisan hate and malignity do not prevail—John Goode will emerge from the ordeal unscathed, while Mahone will have added a darker hue to his already blackened and be-mired reputation.

Postmaster Glennan of Norfolk, always keenly alive to the interests of the people, is making a determined effort to increase the postal facilities between Norfolk and points adjacent to that city. When it is known that letters (and papers) require two days from Norfolk to this point—a distance easily traveled in four hours, it is easy to see the value of his effort. We are now very close to Norfolk—and the fact that under present arrangements speedy correspondence cannot be had with that city makes it inevitable that the close business relations so desirable cannot be had.

We heartily reinforce Norfolk's energetic and public spirited Postmaster—and call upon our representative in Congress to give him whatever aid he may need in this matter which must inure so much to the good of all our people.

The February number of the Amateur Times, a neat little sheet edited and published at Eastville by Master Lloyd Brockenbrough, a member of the Fourth Estate not yet in his teens, lies on our table.—Heartily commending his energy and enterprise—and congratulating him on the good matter and neat typographical appearance of the Times—we place his paper on our exchange list and wish him abundant success.

Strong Appeal for Jefferson Davis.

WASHINGTON, February 28.—In the House of Representatives yesterday Mr. Wolford, of Kentucky, who commanded a cavalry regiment in the Union army during the war, made a notable speech on his bill to pension all the surviving soldiers and sailors of the Mexican war. He pleaded against the exclusion of Jefferson Davis, and said every man who entered the Confederate army and understood its meaning and purpose did exactly as Jefferson Davis. Mr. Reagan said Mr. Davis had five or six years since written a letter, which was used on the floor of the House, asking that his name be omitted from any such bill, as he did not wish to stand in the way of the government doing justice to his comrades in arms. Mr. Wolford said such nobility and magnanimity as this only the more entitled Mr. Davis to consideration. He said the people were ahead of Congress; that they had forgiven him, and did not want him singled out as the sole object of spite and malice.—He alluded to the hate between the Whigs and Tories of the revolution, but when peace was restored all this was forgotten. The words "Whig" or "Tory" were not put in the constitution. Whigs and Tories alike were sent to the Legislatures and to Congress. Whig boys married Tory girls, and Tory boys married Whig girls, and he said: "Let me tell you that this thing of marrying and giving in marriage will go right on, whether you do or not." Mr. Wolford gave a most graphic description of the charge of Jefferson Davis at the battle of the Mississippi Rifles at the battle of Buena Vista, and how the fortunes of the day were retrieved by it. He then related the following incident, which will be appreciated when it is remembered that Jefferson Davis married Gen. Taylor's daughter in opposition to the General's wishes:

"I remember after the battle we brought the dead bodies and laid them down before General Taylor's marquee, and there wept over our dead, for Kentucky was almost literally massacred in that fight.—While mourning over our dead, with hearts full and beating, but still feeling pride in the result, for glory was ours, we were, I remember, hearing General Taylor say to his Adjutant General, Major Bliss, to go and call Jefferson Davis to come to him. He came at once while we were standing there, and General Taylor met him. That was the first time I had ever seen Mr. Davis. General Taylor said to him: 'My daughter is a better judge of men than I am. Henceforth your gallant conduct in saving our army makes you entitled to be my son, and I forgive you.' The arguments of Mr. Wolford will most probably have no weight, for although, as he says, the people wish to bury all the animosities of the war, the politicians have not yet reached that point.—Washington Special Baltimore Sun.

A Literary Curiosity.

and Second Age. Divinely Hand led by Thomas Peyton, of Lincoln's Inn, Gent. Seen and Allowed.—London: Printed by Bernard Alsop for Lawrence Chapman, and are to be sold at his Shop, over against Staple Inn, 1620. Now reprinted in a neat volume, Long Primer type, bound in fine cloth, gilt top, beveled boards. Price 50 cents. The quaint poem, of the title page of which the above is a transcript, appeared nearly half a century earlier than Paradise Lost, and it is intrinsically probable that it would have fallen under the eye of Milton; in any case there are striking points of resemblance between the two poems, and many have supposed Milton's immortal work to have been inspired by the former. Only two copies of the poem are known to be in existence previous to the issue of the present edition, one being in the British Museum, the other in the Bodleian Library, Oxford. The copy in the British Museum was purchased at a noted sale of old books in 1819, by Baron Eolland, who notes upon a blank leaf that it cost him 21l. 17s. 6d., (about $110.00). Some years ago a gentleman of Virginia, Mr. J. L. Peyton, sprung from the old English family of that name, made an accurate transcript of the copy in the British Museum, preserving even the quaint spelling, punctuation, capitalizing, and italicizing of the original. This present edition is printed without alteration. Apart from its presumed connection, with Paradise Lost, the poem has very considerable merits of its own, and is in every way a literary curiosity. John B. Alden, Publisher, New York.

NEWS IN BRIEF.

Jeff Davis is described by the latest visitor to Beauvoir as standing erect and showing no signs of senility or decay. He dresses in black, wears a planter's broad brimmed hat and carries a cane, more from habit than necessity. His hair and a full beard are white and flowing.

The annual report of the Pennsylvania Railroad shows what an enormous business is done by the various lines of railroad which that company owns and controls. Its gross earnings during the year amounted to almost ninety-three million dollars—a sum largely in excess of the entire expenditures of the United States government twenty-six years ago.—Public Ledger.

The sale of Gen. Grant's memoirs has been a great success. The publishers, Messrs. Charles L. Webster & Co., have recently sent Mr. Grant a check for $200,000 as her share of the net profits—70 per cent.—from the sale of the first volume. This is said to be the largest sum ever paid by a publisher on a single edition of a book.

LEGISLATIVE NOTES.

RICHMOND, VA., March 3.—The Senate to-day passed the oyster bill, and it now goes to the House. It proposes to abolish inspectors on the Western Shore, and requires the commissioners to assess and the treasurer to collect the tax. It imposes a license of one dollar and a-half on each ten and three dollars on each dredging vessel. Planted oysters are to be assessed as other property.

The finance committee of the Senate to-day reported that it is expedient to legislate on the subject of the Fulkerson script bill.—This defeats that scheme, for this session at least.

It is said Gov. Lee does not give the least reason to believe he will call the Legislature in extra session. The session practically ends to-morrow or the next day.

The Senate passed a bill to-day to require that coupons tendered for licenses shall be submitted for verification as required under coupon killer No. 1 before licenses for which coupons are offered shall be issued.

The House of Delegates to-day dismissed the bill prohibiting members of the Legislature or State judiciary from accepting free passes on railroads. All the republicans opposed the bill.

Mr. Massey's bill proposing to appoint a commission to confer with the bondholders, and with an authority to arrange for the settlement of West Virginia certificates, was rejected in the Senate.

The bill which passed the House of Delegates Thursday for providing text books for the children in the public schools was regarded as a very good measure. Under its operations the State will contract with publishers for a sufficient number of school books for all the children in the public schools, which will be furnished to them at five per cent. above the original cost price. This will very much lessen the cost of school books and is much better, we think, than for the State to undertake to furnish free text-books, at the risk of lessening the efficiency of the schools in other respects. The bill makes provision for supplying free text-books to children whose parents are not able to supply them, and that is quite as far as the Legislature ought to go in that direction.—Rich. Whig.

RICHMOND, VA., Feb. 28.—The State Senate yesterday, by a vote of 30 to 3, rejected Senator Ible's resolution to amend the constitution so as to repudiate all of the bonds not funded under the Middle-ber settlement in one year after the ratification of the people of this amendment to the constitution. The Governor has approved the local-option bill, and it is now a law.

Chincoteague Fish Manure WILL IT PAY?

This is what the farmer and trucker wants to know when they are asked to buy anything. We are making a manure that will pay farmers and truckers to buy. It is a complete manure having all those ingredients that are necessary to the growth of crops, and in such a condition that they can feed on them. It is not one of those manures that stimulates the crops at first, and then falls before the crops are matured, but it continues to act until the crops are matured, and its effects are lasting as those that have used it say there have been its effects on the second and third crops. It will also produce good crops on the very poorest land; this proves that it is a complete manure. Send and get the testimonials of those that have used it on corn, wheat, oats, potatoes, cabbage, onions, watermelons, &c. It has no equal; and for peach trees, it is unsurpassed. Try it and you will be convinced that it will produce better crops than anything else for the same money.—Those that have tried it say that it produces better crops than any other manure. For testimonials apply to WM. H. LINGG & CO., Chincoteague, Va.

Williams, Clark & Co's
HIGH GRADE BONE FERTILIZERS.
General Office Cotton Exchange Building New York
We take pleasure in again calling the attention of farmers to our High Grade Fertilizers. It being eight years ago this spring since they were first offered to consumers under their present form, and from that time until now there has been an increasing demand for them, which is a far better testimonial to us than any letters of praise could be, although we do not want for these letters, as we are replete of many. It has been our aim to put up the best fertilizers we know how, and the results in the field with them clearly show that we have hit the mark right in the bull's eye, and we believe if consumers will take our target (American Brand, bull's head) they will strike a good result every time—the bull's eye, if their aim is good.

THEIR CHARACTER.
The main characteristic of our fertilizers is that they are prepared with particular reference to the crop, and not to a chemical analysis; the latter does very well in its place, and we believe in chemistry thoroughly, but consumers are too often deceived with the idea that a chemical analysis is the main thing, and if they get a good analysis and a high commercial valuation as figured out with arbitrary prices by the chemist, they must have a fine fertilizer. Now it may happen that a fertilizer, with a commercial valuation of $25.00 per ton, will give a better result on the crop than one with a valuation of $40.00 as based on a chemical analysis. And why should this be? Only because the material used in the one valued at $25.00 was better adapted to the crop than in the other.

THEY ARE UNIFORM.
The goods we manufacture are uniform in composition, and are only varied in proportions, year after year, as we believe it an advantage to the crop. We have such large supplies of Bone, Blood, etc., from the slaughtering establishments of New York, that our fertilizers are largely composed of these, and there is not that inducement for us to use cheaper material, that there might be, if we did not have this material.

BONE FERTILIZERS
Our products are of a bone base, because we believe that is the most satisfactory source of phosphoric acid, and the large amount of animal matter our fertilizers contain makes them especially valuable in what may be called the off or poor seasons. Some years it is noticed that almost any fertilizer will give fairly good results, but we find the most favorable comparisons for our products are in the poor years.
